KP Council keeps public bus services rolling

By Scott Turner, KP News

Longtime Key Peninsula resident Edie Morgan has known for many years that transportation — or lack thereof — is a huge issue on the Key Peninsula.

“We took a survey in 2006, especially asking individuals 50 years of age and older as to what they thought was necessary for them to age in place on the Peninsula,” said Morgan, founder and executive director of the Mustard Seed Project.

“And by golly, transportation came out No. 1 by far. I didn’t especially want to focus on transportation, but it was clearly a necessity.”

The first piece of the solution was the Key Peninsula Senior Ride Program, for which Mustard Seed partnered with Catholic Community Services to train volunteer drivers.

Fast-forward to 2010 when Morgan began noticing all the empty school busses parked at Evergreen Elementary.

“Edie looked at them and said ‘Let’s put people on those busses. They’re sitting there empty — why not fill them?’” said Mustard

Seed Program Administrator Amanda Walston.

That idea earned Mustard Seed a grant through the Pierce County Coordinated Transportation Commission to use school buses to provide transportation for Key Peninsula residents when the busses weren’t being used by the Peninsula School District (PSD).

In May 2011, the bus program began giving free rides to Key Peninsula residents.

“I think it’s a great program,” said bus driver Crystal Petesch. “I’d much rather see people on our buses, than people hitchhiking.”

Administration of the project recently was taken over by the KP School Bus Connect, an arm of the Key Peninsula Community Council.

“Mustard Seed’s board of directors wanted them to focus more on just senior citizens’ issues and not the entire community,” said Marcia Harris, vice president of the Community Council and coordinator of the School Bus Connection.

Vaughn resident teaching ABCs of swimming, water safety

By Scott Turner, KP News

Vaughn resident Dee Adams has been teaching people to swim since she was 10 or 11 years old.

When she was growing up, her father was in charge of the swim program at a pool in the county park in Enumclaw and Adams and her sister, Peg, spent their summers in the pool.

This summer, Adams, who owns Bay View Swim School, is giving swimming lessons to Key Peninsula children ages 4 through early teens.

Some of the youngsters have no experience in the water, some know just a few strokes and some are working on perfecting their techniques and building endurance, she said.

Janice Bryant of Longbranch enrolled her two sons in Adams’ classes earlier this summer.

“They’ve gone from being what we wouldn’t call ‘great’ swimmers to knowing all their strokes,” Bryant said. “Dee is Red Cross certified and she’s just a delight. She talks to each child individually and also as a group. The kids just seem to grow and revel. She’s full of laughs and she tolerates everything, but she still challenges them.

They come home tired, but happy. She’s a precious gem for us out here on the Pen-

Even before Pierce Transit cut service to the Key Peninsula, the council had recognized that transportation was a critical issue in the area.

“How can you get into town? How can you get to the Park & Ride? How can you get to the doctor or the grocery store if you don't have a private vehicle?” Harris said.

The council was instrumental in getting the original grant renewed through 2015. “The grant is for approximately $50,000 a year,” Harris said.

“Money is used for transportation and administration, advertising and working to make sure the people in the community know about this service being available.”

The grant was funded through the Puget Sound Education Services District (ESD) through the State Department of Transportation.

and special needs individuals. We're underneath those guidelines on the state level,” explained Annie Bell, the PSD director of transportation, who has been associated with the project from the ground up.

“For the summertime, the bus leaves from the bus garage and goes out to Lake of the Woods and Lake Holiday and then goes down Wright Bliss Road, up Olson to

Key Center. So people from Lake of the Woods and Lake Holiday can get on the bus and get dropped off at the Key Center market at a certain time and continue down to Lake Kathryn and to the Purdy Park & Ride. The bus also goes south toward Home and Palmer Lake to pick up and bring people who live in that area to the market. There are dedicated stops where people can get on or off the bus,” Bell said.

Bus service runs one day a week — on Tuesdays.

In August, the bus will run three times a day — between 8 and 9:30 a.m. then between 2 and 4 p.m.,” said Danna Webster, council president.

The afternoon run also will stop at the food bank and at Volunteer Park.

“And we also pick up at the Purdy Park & Ride at 4:45 and take people back to wherever they need to go. There are about 12 to 15 stops all together,” Harris said. “Next school year we hope to be able to run two days a week.”

Webster said the program is a wonderful opportunity for people on the KP to get around the Peninsula for free.

“We're making our tax dollars work for us here on the Peninsula,” Webster said.

Jane and Win Rumsey agreed. They were observing a class that included their two grandchildren, Matt and Grace Nesbit.

“The kids are having a great time learning all the different strokes,” Jane Rumsey said. “Dee gives detailed instructions as to how it should be done in a friendly way and the kids have a good time. They also have free time afterwards to play games, which everybody is eager to participate in. I’d certainly recommend this class.”

Ten-year-old McHardy Bryant had words of praise from a student’s perspective. “I came here to get better at swimming so we could go to different places and we could have more fun swimming in our pond. Our teacher has given us skills and confidence and she’s made it much easier to know how to swim. She really does great teaching. She’s a wonderful person to be with, and she’s friendly and very smart.”

Adams and her husband and children moved to Vaughn in 1988. They bought a house with a swimming pool, and while she worked as a counselor at Key Peninsula Middle School, she started teaching swimming in the summer as a way to get a little more income.

“My sister lived on Fox Island and she had a pool, and she started giving lessons on Fox Island and I started giving lessons in Vaughn.

“She and I helped our dad with the swim program at the county pool in Enumclaw and we also lifeguarded there, and we also helped dad with his swim program at home.”

Adams took a break from swimming for several years when she got a job in South Kitsap that required her to work during the summer.

She started teaching again when she retired in 2009.

Teaching swimming is Adams’ way of giving back to the community and keeping myself busy,” she said.

“And there’s also a philosophical reason: We live in a beautiful area with lots of water — and people are in the water and on the water all the time, and I think it’s important for their kids to be safe around the water. They enjoy being in the water and so do I.”

Adams thrives on “the satisfaction of seeing that feeling of accomplishment — when you know that the kids are excited. They’ve broken through some sort of a barrier — something they were afraid to do and now they’ve gone beyond that and learned something new — and they’re having fun in the water,” she said.

Adams limits her class size to just four students in the pool at a time. She’ll offer another two-week session this month before school starts.

For information, contact Dee Adams at (253) 884-9167.

Choosing to remember

Last fall, as a new member of the community, I responded to a request for Key Pen News volunteer columnists.

Initially I ignored the offer, but after a frustrating day at school and a long walk on the beach, I submitted my application. I did have something to write about, something to say, but did anyone care to listen?

Well, either very few people applied, or my topic was unique enough that I was accepted.

Last month, Scott Turner (editor) contacted me again. Why, exactly, was I writing? What was it that I really wanted to say?

He said to "read between the lines."

Deborah Allen Read to Me

What truly interests readers, he said, is what is happening to them, now.

Although what I will share with you is not happening on the Key Peninsula (I work in a small rural school district in another county) it is happening across the United States, and it is affecting all of us every day.

As school districts continue to have funding decreased while academic expect-

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

New volunteers part of Fire District 16 growth

Dear Editor,

The Board of Fire Commissioners for the Key Peninsula Fire Department would like to congratulate and welcome 13 new volunteer firefighters and emergency medical technicians (EMTs) to our department. We recognize the hard work it takes to graduate from the academy, and appreciate your service to save lives and property in our community.

Our department relies on a balance of full-time and volunteer firefighter/EMTs to respond to emergency calls in our community. These new recruits will double the number of volunteers we have serving the public.

In addition, one full-time firefighter/EMT started in January, and two more will begin with the department in mid-August, making a total of three full-time positions to improve our emergency response. Two more full-time emergency personnel will be hired in 2014, as well.

We will be analyzing data over the next few months and report back on how emergency response times have improved. This was our commitment to the public, and we appreciate their support that makes this possible.

*Ray Lamoureux, Chair
Board of Fire Commissioners
Key Peninsula Fire Department*

Coming into service in 1936, it was meant to replace the model 1903 Springfield bolt action rifle.

It is a semi-automatic rifle chambered in the 30.06 cartridge. In fact, both the Garand and the M1903 were retained and fought side by side in World War II. The Garand became the standard-issue rifle of U.S. forces in World War II and the Korean War. It served with distinction until officially being replaced by what I like to call its "son," the selective fire M14 in 1957.

Like most military rifles of the 1930s, the Garand was loaded from the top of the breech, with the bolt locked to the rear. But unlike bolt action rifles that held four or five rounds, the Garand held eight (one other rifle held 10, a bolt action, the British Enfield, but did not have near the power of the Garand).

These eight rounds were held together in a spring steel en-bloc clip. This clip functions as part of the action of the rifle, and is ejected with a melodious "prang!" upon the eight rounds fired. Then reaching into a bandoleer, a soldier would pull out another en-bloc clip with eight rounds and load the rifle again.

Many a World War II vet has sat around with combat brothers and reminisced about the Garand.

At the time of its development, most of the world's military leaders' opinions were that there was no way that a semi-automatic rifle could be used with any reliability or accuracy.

How wrong they all were. In the hands of the brave men who went to war to defeat

Hitler and Hirohito, the Garand gave them a superior rate of fire on the battlefield, in a weapon as robust as a tank.

My dad said when he was in the Philippines and Okinawa, after a day of fighting, he would go down to the river to wash off. He would open up his Garand, wash the mud out of it, load it and fire a round into the bank and go on patrol. He said he knew the gun would fire no matter what.

There has been much debate in gun circles over the years as to the best battle rifle ever invented.

Space age materials resulting in lighter and faster shooting weapons are being used to give our military the best equipment in the world today. But when you look at the sheer magnitude of World War II with all its different battle terrains and weather from jungle rains and mud, to hot desert and sand, to hard frozen ground with snow and sleet -- the theater was a challenge.

There was no going back to the drawing board, the gun had to work. The M1 Garand was right there with those heroes of yesterday putting the hurt on the Axis powers.

Would we have won the war without the Garand? Oh yes, there is no doubt. But the Garand helped get it done faster, and proved that when pushed, America is going to push back and push back hard.

tations are increased, administrators face the task of how to balance increasingly meager budgets. This in a time of needed technology purchases for staff and students, as well as an exploding population of special-needs students.

Where to cut the budget? P.E. and sports programs were targeted a few years ago, but with the epidemic of childhood obesity, that is no longer the acceptable thing to do.

A prime target, usually the first, is the school library. Why do students need books when they can use computers and eReaders?

Hey, nothing against eReaders, all three of my children have one, as do I, but we all agree they are for convenience and are not the same as a book — but that is for another column.

Why fund the library at all? My district has not provided me with the funds to purchase new books for my students in five years. New books (more than 3,000) have been purchased with donations and fundraising.

As I said, my district is small, a K-8 district of two schools with two libraries. I am the only librarian, and I have had two assistants, one in each library. I spend the morning in one building and the afternoon in the other. My “commute” is a two-minute walk.

With my two highly-skilled assistants, we were able to keep both libraries open and available to staff and students all day long, which is as it should be at a school.

Then new administrators arrived, and locked the doors of the middle school library four mornings a week to save money by reassigning my secretary to work as a preschool assistant.

This made it difficult for our history teacher, Dr. Scott Dakers, who had undertaken an amazing journey with our seventh-grade students. He chose to teach about the Holocaust in a very unique way.

Dakers taught, through literature, non-fiction texts and first-person accounts, how the world had tolerated evil. He allowed our students to see that tolerating something, putting up with something that you don't like, was never meant for people.

We all know that one can tolerate something for only so long — Dachau, Auschwitz and Bergen-Belsen are proof of that.

Dakers teamed with English teacher Ruth H., and together they taught these children to write expository text, and inspired them to care about what they wrote.

And care indeed. The children prepared a presentation for the community, to share their learning, and to introduce a special guest. Her name is Elane Geller, a child survivor of the Holocaust.

“Choosing to Remember” is the book of extraordinary essays written by our students, and dedicated to Ms. Geller. It is filled with essays that were nurtured by their readings in the library; essays that were informed by their research in the library.

Deborah Allen is a teacher-librarian, and she enjoys reading to children all the time. She can be reached at windmeadowfarm@gmail.com.

Key Peninsula Parks & Recreation Foundation

Preserving our lands and rural culture through our parks

Here's a quiz! When you last opened the newspaper, tuned into your all-news-all-the-time radio station or switched on your TV, how many good news stories did you get? Well, we want to make this article different, because a lot of good news happens right here at home on the Key Peninsula. Here's a great example:

Some of the donations that come into the Key Pen Parks and Recreation Foundation (the Foundation) are "targeted" for certain projects or programs, such as the Ken Pen Parks Scholarships Program. This worthwhile program allows children, who could otherwise not attend Key Pen programs for financial reasons, to get "scholarship" funding. Thanks to many supporters throughout our community, the KP Foundation is helping to build a stronger community, giving kids a camp experience, and giving our young people constructive ways to spend their summer months. We think it's working and here's how:

Scholarship Spotlight

Young Mallory Brown has participated in KP Parks programs since she was three years old. Her mom, Susie, told Parks staff back then that "You're going to see a lot of us!" and she has been true to her word!

Mallory has participated in the Basketball Skills Clinic, the Soccer Skills Clinic, the Spring Break Camps, the Mid-Winter Break Camps, the Santa Breakfast, the All-Hallows Harvest Celebration, and the Cinema Under the Stars in the summer. Mom plans to sign Mallory up for Summer Break Camp, as well.

Parents and their children from all around the Key Peninsula can take advantage of Key Pen Parks programs and the Foundation's financial assistance. As Susie puts it, "Mallory enjoys having so many different activities to choose from and she has formed friendships with the people she's met through the programs. She has also learned an important life lesson there: understanding that winning and losing are just part of the game!"

We hope you will come and join Mallory and other friends and neighbors on the Key Peninsula. See for yourself how these successful programs can work for your children. In the meantime, enjoy these photos of Mallory and her teammates in action!

Foundation Project Update

Last year the Foundation promised to help build a picnic shelter for the new playground at the Key Peninsula Civic Center. Thanks to the generosity of the Angel Guild, which made a significant donation to the project, we now have in excess of $5,000. This brings us halfway to our goal, but WE NEED YOUR HELP NOW! In making a donation now you help us build a stronger Key Peninsula AND have the use of a wonderful new shelter at the Civic Center.

Be part of the good news story! Donations are tax deductible and easy to make. More information about donating is below. Have a wonderful summer!

Bischoff FISH food bank reduced hours expanded following plea

By Rick Sorrels, KP News

The Bischoff FISH food bank in downtown Key Center is reducing its hours of operation significantly.

In March 2011, when the food bank was located at the Key Peninsula Lutheran Church, Wally Haugaard, the manager, signed a contract with FISH in order to gain access to more sources to feed the growing number of people in need on the Key Peninsula.

"We signed the contract subject to FISH's promise that we would continue to operate the food bank in a manner which would best serve our KP residents," Haugaard said. "We were specifically to retain control over the days and hours of operation."

The FISH food bank has been open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday since its move to Key Center in March 2013.

On July 9, 2013, Beth Elliott, the executive director of FISH, met with Haugaard and informed him that the food bank hours were reduced to four hours per day on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday effective Aug. 1. Elliott also told Haugaard that his resignation was expected because she knew that this change would not be acceptable to Haugaard.

Haugaard immediately resigned, as expected.

Sandy Roszman, the president of the FISH board of directors indicated that the board had considered and decided upon the change, but Elliott later acknowledged that she implemented the decision on her own initiative under the authority granted to her in the FISH bylaws.

Elliott and Roszman both said that the change was made to appease one of the tenants along the driveway easement going from Key Pen Highway to the building occupied by the food bank.

"We want to be good neighbors, with the best relations possible," Roszman said. "There was also a desire to standardize our hours with operations at our other food banks."

"This change really makes no sense. All of our workers are unpaid volunteers. It costs nothing more to be open the longer hours," Haugaard said.

Roszman said the board understands that its volunteers are very committed, caring and compassionate. "We are trying to use our resources to best meet the needs of the community and that's a tough task," she said.

The Key Center-based food bank is manned completely by non-paid volunteers. They mobilized, with 12 making a surprise appearance at the monthly FISH board of directors meeting on July 17.

Kimberly Miller, the acting volunteer coordinator (Haugaard's replacement), gave a heartfelt plea to reconsider the board's decision to reduce hours, citing numerous specific examples where seniors and disabled citizens, persons working multiple jobs for minimum wage, persons without public or private transportation are unable to obtain needed food for themselves and their family under the shortened hours.

Emails were exchanged and a final decision was made on July 24 that the food bank will be open to the public from 2 to 8 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

During the month of May, the food bank served 3,134 families, with a total of 10,117 family members, some coming from Kitsap County.

The Bischoff FISH food bank is not affiliated with the food bank operated by the Key Peninsula Community Services and Senior Center near Home.

The food bank is located at 8908 Key Peninsula Highway and can be contacted by calling 858-7226.

Summer Food Program serves healthy meals to families in need

By Alice Kinerk, KP News

The Summer Food Program is serving free lunches to Key Peninsula children in need, along with their families, at the Key Peninsula Civic Center every Monday, Wednesday and Friday throughout the summer.

An extension of Backpacks 4 Kids, which provides food for students to take home over weekends during the school year, food for the Summer Food Program comes in through the new FISH food bank at Key Center. The program also receives funds to purchase food from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI). The Peninsula School District qualifies for the OSPI funds because of the high percentage of students receiving free and reduced lunches at three area schools.

However, with the funds come strict nutritional requirements similar to the requirements for school lunches. Each meal must contain milk, meat or other protein, grains, as well as three-quarters cup of fruits and vegetables.

Program supervisor Karen Jorgenson is proud of the fresh, healthy meals served. What sets the Summer Food Program apart, she said, is its wonderful cooks, who prepare many foods from scratch.

On the menu one day in July was turkey with gravy and cranberry sauce. There also were carrots that had been freshly diced and steamed, and buttery, homemade mashed potatoes.

Jorgenson, who has been involved with the food bank for four years, has seen an increased need for food and services in the area, with many guests reliant on the program for an extended period of time.

"Year after year some of the same families participate. They count on us," Jorgenson said. The food bank at Key Center also has been busy, she noted, sometimes serving as many as 40 patrons a day.

Area resident Kathie Black, who stopped by recently for a meal with her children, agrees that the program is helpful to the community. "If I didn't have this program, sometimes the kids wouldn't eat. The food is great. I have no complaints," she said.

Guests without transportation to the Civic Center can catch a free shuttle at Palmer Lake. Upon arriving, each guest signs in and washes their hands. Parents are not required to complete any forms or provide proof of income. Several folding tables set up around the Whitmore Room give families a place to eat together. Jorgenson moves around the room chatting with guests, her smile warm and welcoming.

Before guests leave, Jorgenson always makes sure one or two items are sent home with them. Sometimes these are household items, such as linens. Early in the summer, books were given out to keep children reading while out of school.

Many food items don't work well for the Backpacks 4 Kids program simply because they are too big to fit in the backpacks or too heavy for kids to carry home. These are saved to give out during the summer program as well. On a recent day, oversized boxes of corn flakes were sent home along with heavy jugs of grapefruit juice.

Jorgenson is inspired to stay involved with the program when she sees how excited the children are to be there, frequently asking what will be served for lunch next time. She also feels grateful for the generosity of her Key Peninsula neighbors. "Without the support of the community we couldn't feed these kids," she said.

Area residents interested in donating to FISH food bank can get more information at ghpfish.com/donate.html. Free lunches are offered Monday, Wednesday and Friday at Key Peninsula Civic Center from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The power to be...

A look at Key Peninsula Parks accomplishments

By Rick Sorrels, KP News

The property tax levy on the November ballot would provide operations and maintenance funds for Key Pen Parks.

The voters created the Key Peninsula Metropolitan Park District in 2004, which replaced Key Peninsula Parks and Recreation District that dissolved in 2005.

The change was spurred by new state legislation that authorized metropolitan park districts. The old district was funded only by a 1/10 of one cent per dollar sales tax, commonly referred to as Zoo Trek funds. Volunteer help was the norm to accomplish anything.

The new metropolitan park district also can collect funds through a property tax levy.

The Zoo Trek funds still provide about $110,000 per year. Property taxes have provided about $650,000 each year since 2008, but are expected to drop to nothing next year due to priorities in disbursement set by law.

The only assets of the old park district were Volunteer Park with its baseball diamonds — built by volunteer help, as its name suggests — and the 1.75-acre parcel of raw land in Home, obtained by Pierce County through a condemnation action, now become Home Park.

The new park district paid the former district $30,600 for the two properties so that the old parks district could close its books with a zero balance.

A parks survey in 2007 identified that Key Peninsula residents wanted Key Pen Parks to concentrate most heavily on land acquisition and development of trails.

According to Key Pen Parks Executive Director Scott Gallacher, since 2008, Key Pen Parks has done the following:

- Invested $465,000 in improvements to Volunteer Park (only $140,000 of which came out of the budget, the remainder from grants).
- Spent $200,000 to develop Home Park.
- Acquired Rocky Creek Conservation Area (244 acres) through a lease that costs $1 per year.

- Acquired a Taylor Bay (39 acres with 600 feet of shoreline) through $1.35 million in grants, with nothing spent from the parks budget.

- Acquired Minter Creek property (5 acres) costing $181,000, with only $90,500 from the parks budget.

- Acquired the 360 Trails property (360 acres) on a no-cost 50-year lease from DNR. The property is valued at $6.4 million.

- Acquired Maple Hollow (58 acres with 1,400 feet of beach) on a no-cost 50-year lease. The property is valued at $1.5 million. Improvements costing $188,000 were completed, with two-thirds coming from grants.

- Acquired Key Central Forest (480 acres) on a no-cost 50-year lease from DNR. The property is valued at $3.5 million.

- Acquired Ketchum Property (5 acres) purchased for $50,000 as a trailhead to Key Central Forest, that had no road access.

- Acquired Gateway Park (39 acres on SR-302), adjacent to 360 Trails. Purchased for $800,000, with one-half coming from grants.

Key Pen Parks now owns or controls 1,233 acres of park land with more than 10 miles of trails.

Pierce County had offered to transfer Purdy Spit and Devil's Head to Key Pen Parks, but the commissioners rejected the offer because of liability issues or hidden costs for which no funds were available in the foreseeable future.

"The 2007 Comprehensive Plan tasked us with acquiring land, especially land with access to water," Gallacher said.

"Future emphasis will be on developing these lands. With a total budget of less than $1 million per year for everything (maintenance, operations, capital investment, et cetera.), we believe that we have done rather well."

A dissenting voice comes from Bob Richardson, who resides next to the Minter Creek park property.

"The parks district should never have

Local agencies, groups bring Project Homeless Connect to the Key

By Scott Turner, KP News

On Friday, Aug. 9, a coalition of Pierce County organizations will host an event called Project Homeless Connect at the Church of Jesus Christ Latter-day Saints on the Key Peninsula.

The coalition includes Key Peninsula Community Services, South Sound Outreach and the Coalition to End Homelessness, with support from the Peninsula Emergency Preparedness Coalition (PEP-C).

According to Roberta Marsh, director of South Sound Outreach, the free event will include medical, dental and vision care clinics; veterans support; income tax preparation; housing access; haircuts; ID replacement and more.

Similar events have taken place at the Tacoma Dome and in Spanaway and Sumner.

“We selected Key Peninsula for this event because there is a high rate of need and there are more barriers to receiving services here,” Marsh said. “We also know that there’s a higher number of vets living in the area.”

The event is for anyone who’s experienced homelessness or has significant needs, she added.

Marsh anticipates an attendance of 150-200 people. “Since this is our first event on the Peninsula, we’re just really planning for what our partners think will come. We serve 1,700 at Tacoma Dome. We’ve always had a van that transports folks from out here to the dome, but we usually only get one bus full, so we hope that by having the event out here, more people will be able to come,” she said.

Key Peninsula Community Services is purchased the Minter Creek property. It is inappropriate for a park,” Richardson said. “There are no plans to develop this property. It’s long and narrow, in the middle of (zoned) R-10 residential land. We neighbors are being plagued with break-ins and thefts by people using this as an access to our private lands.”

Gallacher said the park commissioners chose to purchase that land.

“We are unable to sell it due to deed hosting a Key Free Clinic at the event, with Dr. Roes providing services, said KPCS Executive Director Penny Gazabat.

“We’re coordinating with a lot of different agencies to bring these services to the Key Peninsula area. And it’s not just for homeless, but also for folks that are struggling in other areas,” Gazabat said.

Although her organization is not large enough to provide comprehensive services, through partnering, the KPCS can offer a lot more to Peninsula residents — more than they’ve typically received in the past, she said.

“It’s a huge group effort to make this Project Homeless Connect happen. A stand-alone agency can’t do this by themselves. The community needs to help us spread the word that there are very important resources being brought to us in this event,” Gazabat said.

For information, contact KP Community Services at (253) 884-4440.

restrictions imposed by the grant monies used to purchase it. We will do the best we can with what we have,” he said.

Key Pen Parks also has partnership and grant programs for community organizations, and a full slate of recreation programs and special events.

For details, go to keypenparks.com, or call 884-9240.

Editor’s note: Next month we will report on the recent survey results, and plans to develop existing park lands.

Citizens Against Crime still going strong after 25 years

By Karen Lovett, KP News

In December 1987, three young teenagers broke into the school bus depot in Purdy and smashed as many windows as they could reach. Key Peninsula Middle School was broken into and computers were vandalized.

Lions Club members Hugh McMillan and Rhys Wood sought retribution for damages and brought a class action lawsuit against the parents of the teens.

News media covered the story and met with McMillan and Wood at the Key Peninsula Civic Center. McMillan faced the camera alone and said, "Let's do something." The two men expected negative reprisals from the community. Instead, within minutes of the news release, McMillan's phone was ringing.

Nineteen people met at what was then the Huckleberry Inn in Key Center. A week later, January 11, 1988, the next meeting was hosted at the Civic Center and attended by 124 people.

Pierce County Sheriff Ray Fjetland,

Sgt. Seweer (the deputy in charge of Pierce County this side of the Narrows Bridge), and Pierce County Executive Joe Stortini attended the meetings and gave their support of the community effort.

McMillan came up with the name Citizens Against Crime (CAC) and designed a logo. Board members were elected, with McMillan taking the lead as the first president. Someone told him, "They're all enthused now, Hugh, but you'll never see them again after six months."

"This is the longest six months in history," McMillan said. "We're still going."

The sheriff's department initiated a 10-hour training program. Members answered the phone, shredded documents and filed routine reports. Eventually, the department hired paid employees to take over responsibilities done by CAC volunteers.

In 1995 a plan was formulated to have a mobile patrol. Gig Harbor car dealers offered to loan cars, but insurance problems left them with the alternative plan, using magnetic signs with the CAC logo mounted on private vehicles. Volunteers do not carry weapons, but became the eyes and ears of the county sheriff and were provided tape recorders and log books.

Initial resentment by deputies soon changed. Someone from the sheriff's department attends CAC meetings whenever possible. It is a good way to meet the deputies who serve the community and let them know the issues in the area.

The Key Peninsula is considered a very low crime area. McMillan said that if you don't report the crime, it didn't happen.

The Key Peninsula has lost deputies because they were transferred to other districts with higher crime rates, said current CAC president, Cindy Worden. Not all 9-1-1 calls get transferred to the sheriff's department. Keep track of the incident and time you call. The department checks the list of reported calls with calls they actually receive. They want to get more officers out here, but need cooperation of the citizens, she said.

According to Worden, local crimes committed in the first half of 2013 have already surpassed the number for the entire year of 2012. She said the CAC goal is to get more members and for every neighborhood to have watches.

Worden advised to know the vehicles that belong on your street. Lock your car and keep valuables out of sight. Car prowlers are looking for easy access and so are home invaders. Summer temperatures offer an opportunity to burglars this time of year.

"CAC isn't just about crime. It is about safety," Worden said. "Remember to slow down in construction zones. Watch the speed limits."

The CAC would like to invite prior members to meet and celebrate at 6 p.m. Aug. 15, at the home of Cindy Worden.

The CAC is hopeful that more community members will get involved.

"We are looking for new volunteer patrol members to help keep our area crime-free. Join us at our meetings at the

Key Pen Parks drum camp and LIC Drum Fest set to rock the Key

KP News staff report

Early in the fall of 2012, the Longbranch Improvement Club (LIC) leadership had a grand idea. They wanted to bring back the feel of the former "Beyond the Borders" event with a one-day drum festival in the summer of 2013.

Jessica Smeall, Key Pen Parks recreation coordinator, said the LIC asked if the park district could be involved in this effort.

"I immediately thought of a PeeWee drum camp during the week prior to the LIC festival, in which the campers could prepare a performance for the festival," Smeall said.

The two groups spent a year pulling all the details together. The park drum camp is set for Aug. 5-9 with the LIC's Drum Fest following on Aug. 10.

The park camp target two ages — PeeWees (ages 4-7) and Park PALS (ages 11-14), who will serve as volunteers during the camp.

According to Smeall, the hope is to pair each PeeWee with a PAL, to create a dynamic learning environment in which participants can learn from each other. The PALS will be led by their own leadership instructor, with lessons and hands-on learning to bring their service to life.

The PeeWee program will be led by Smeall, "with help from some amazing guest instructors," she said.

On Monday and Friday of the camp, County Bookwalter, a true drum aficionado, will teach many students.

"County's passion for drums has always been personally inspiring to me, and he credits drumming with helping him through the many ups and downs of life. He is the perfect musician and artist to motivate and inspire these young drummers," Smeall said.

The main theme of his time at camp will be "sound exploration."

"They need to feel free to hit it," Bookwalter said.

He believes the more exploration students feel comfortable with, the more they will feel free to create and explore with other sounds and patterns.

County will perform at the Drum Fest with his drum set and some electronic accompaniment, and also help the children with their performance.

Smeall encourages the community to consider joining the effort by donating a drum, referring a great drum instructor, sending a child to camp or to volunteer, or to come out to the Drum Fest at the LIC on Aug. 10 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. (drum campers perform at 10 a.m.).

Other performances for the event are: Clan Gordon Pipe and Drum, Gary Gibson steel drums, Leif Totusek and Candela, Ollie Klomp and the Malcolm Clark Trio and Kyla Jones and William Hines.

"The LIC Drum Fest will be a feast of rhythm with something for everyone, for every age and taste. It's going to be a full day of beats, claps and taps. Oh, and there's barbecue and beer garden," said Tim Heitzman, LIC event chairman.

For information, visit longbranchimprovementclub.org or keypenparks.com.

Home fire station on the third Thursday of the month at 7 p.m. Our next scheduled meeting will be on Sept. 19," Worden said.

Individuals also can email CAC if they need CAC signs, want to start a block watch or need a speaker for a local organization or event.

Local author releases a history of Gig Harbor

By Karen Lovett, KP News

The newest addition to Arcadia Publishing's popular Images of America series, "Gig Harbor," was the brainstorm of Longbranch resident Donald R. Tjossem.

Tjossem grew up in Eastern Washington and moved to the Puget Sound area with his parents in 1963 after graduating from Washington State University.

He spent 35 years working in the retail banking industry, which took him to many branches throughout the region. In 1986 he went to work for Gig Harbor National Bank and moved to Longbranch on the Key Peninsula, where he took a keen interest in the local community and its history.

Retirement from banking provided a turning point in his career. He returned to school to earn a master of science degree from Capella University School of Human Services. He retired for the second time after spending five years as a chemical dependency counselor in schools and prisons.

With more free time on his hands, he enrolled in history and writing courses at

to finish the publishing process.

Tjossem said the Tacoma Public Library was the best source of information and images. Harbor History Museum and friends in the area provided family portraits and more background material. Washington State Historical Society in Tacoma and Museum of History and Industry in Seattle also were useful, he said.

Tjossem enjoyed learning about the area. "Learning is a constant process. The hardest thing is overcoming writer's block," he said.

More than 200 vintage images and memories of Gig Harbor's past provide a window through time as the area developed with a rich logging and fishing culture. The lumber mills that once fueled the economy are closed, but fishing continues to flourish in this maritime community, he said.

Tjossem has followed up with another project, working with the Bainbridge Island Historical Museum to write the history of the island. That book also took a year to complete.

The book about Gig Harbor is available from Mostly Books in Gig Harbor and other area bookstores and retailers, online or through Arcadia Publishing at arcadiapublishing.com.

the Tacoma campus of the University of Washington and spent much time at Harbor History Museum.

He noticed Gig Harbor wasn't covered by the regional Images of America series.

"I decided to send in a proposal to Arcadia Publishing and they accepted it," Tjossem said. He said it took a year to write the book and another five months

Several generations celebrate 75 years on their beach

By Colleen Slater, KP News

Swimming, waterskiing, boating, fishing, digging clams and geoducks, sleeping in tents and playing games are among the many memories recalled of a special stretch of beach on Rocky Bay.

Five couples, University of Washington friends, bought property in 1937 for $1 per waterfront foot.

They divided the beach front into individual lots, but kept together 10 timbered acres across the road with a spring to supply them with fresh water.

Tents went up and WPA (Works Projects Administration) built outhouses for each place.

The first cabins were constructed in 1939, but the children and even some adults continued to sleep in their tents.

One of the families, the McLeans, used a large circus tent with room for a double bed, daughter Sally's cot, and a dresser. The boys, Bill and Alan, used a pup tent until Bill built a tree house where he slept.

They put up a cook shed with a roof, wooden floor, wood stove and a table, and kept perishable food in a cooler in the ground. Electricity and running water were added much later.

A row to Vaughn or a walk to Victor supplied groceries besides the fish, geoducks and clams they managed to get.

The moms organized some games and contests, but the children spent most of their time together, choosing their own entertainment, whether building a raft from driftwood, looking for agates or shells and spending plenty of time in the water.

"Every day there was a project," said Patti Chapman. "There were overnights sleeping in beach forts made with driftwood, shared dinners on the beach, fireside games, songs and stories."

Tim Chapman and Sally McLean collected bits of news and events from each family and Chapman wrote up a newspaper by hand.

The five families — Win and Betty McLean, Ed and Catherine Lewis, Ingalls and Beth Hall, Howard and Peg Selby and John and Helen Chapman — had a dozen children between them. Now, many of the 35 grandchildren and at least that many great-grandchildren continue to enjoy their beaches every summer.

The Halls sold their property to the Selbys, and all but one of the original cabins have been remodeled or reconstructed, with two being winterized.

Patti Chapman, who spent summers on Washon and Maury Island as a child, loved the idea of rebuilding the Chapman cabin as a place they could spend summers after husband Tim's retirement.

They now spend up to six months at Rocky Bay every year, while their winter home is in Kalispell, Mont. The other second-generation couples live in Western Washington or Oregon, while their children are spread out across the country.

"Our generation is dying off," Chapman said. "The children and grandchildren are now the owners."

A commemorative book of stories and photos was created last year to celebrate 75 years of family ownership of these properties.

Patti hopes the grandchildren will recognize how special this place was and pass on to their heirs the gems of its history.

The many, varied duties of the KP lone ranger

By Steve Whitford, KP News

If you spend any time at the local state parks you'll eventually meet Ranger Janet Shonk.

A local woman from Silverdale, Shonk graduated from Western Washington State University in 1999 with a degree in environmental policy and assessment.

In 1999, she was hired by Washington State Parks as a ranger in training.

Her first assignment was at Cape Disappointment State Park, near Ilwaco.

Three years later she was assigned to Jerrill Cove on Harstine Island. In 2006, she moved to Penrose Point State Park, where she resides and works today.

Shonk's job classification is Ranger 3, which puts three parks under her jurisdiction: Penrose, Joemma and Kopachuck. There are two rangers who assist her, Kristie Cronin at Joemma and Dennis Mills at Kopachuck. Shonk is the lone ranger at Penrose.

"It's a job where you wear many hats because you oversee all aspects of running a park. This includes the obvious duties of fee collection, law enforcement, safety, rescue and visitor registration," Shonk said.

A ranger also performs a host of jobs one wouldn't suspect, such as coordinating park supplies, paying bills, bank deposits, doing carpentry and planning for the three parks, she said.

A typical day starts at 8 a.m., with a meeting with park staff to address maintenance issues. The rest of the day is filled with everything else that needs to be done to keep the park running.

"It's like managing a little city," Shonk explained. "State parks have their share of problems including drunks, thugs and deadbeats."

When they are busy, Shonk instructs junior rangers-in-progress, a program educating children about the park and its unique ecology. She also presents evening lectures by campfire light.

Besides the aquatic residents such as salmon, seals and killer whales, the parks' 160 acres are home to coyotes, fox and bears.

It's also Shonk's year-round residence.

"In the winter it's like having your own personal park," she said. "But imagine what it's like to live where you work. Strange things happen in state parks."

Some incidents Shonk mentioned were the time the park was invaded by cows and the exotic pheasant that moved in for a while. Some incidents Shonk was unwilling to discuss.

Most of the time, Shonk is the lone ranger who wears a badge and carries a firearm. She usually goes about her duties alone; seldom is there a "Tonto." There's always an element of risk inherent in this profession. Less than two years ago Ranger Margaret Anderson was shot to death at Mount Rainier National Park.

Shonk is dispatched through the state patrol and is capable of instant communication if necessary. All park rangers perform duties that can be difficult and dangerous, but often delightful, she said.

Penrose State Park is located at 321 158th Ave., KPS, Lakebay. For information about the activities or reservations at the park, call 884-2526.

Local edible and medicinal plant presentation comes to town

KP News staff report

When Dottie Beaver got stung by a bee, her mother didn't run to the medicine cabinet for a remedy. She went outside and plucked a leaf from a wild plant growing in the yard. Fluid from the torn leaf was squeezed onto the painful sting to alleviate the pain and reduce swelling.

Beaver, of Port Orchard, will be sharing her knowledge during a Friends of Key Peninsula Library on Aug. 8.

Beaver, a well know speaker, said knowledge of medicinal properties of many plants was passed down to her for generations from her mother's Native American ancestors.

"I grew up in a family that believed you are what you eat," Beaver said.

They gathered native wild plants instead of shopping at a grocery store for produce. She built on this knowledge with studies in botany. A lifetime spent hiking through the woods searching for medicinal and edible plants and mushrooms has given her an appreciation of the bounty of nature around us, she said.

According to Beaver, you might think twice before pulling all the weeds out of your yard and tossing them into the compost heap. Local vegetation might just make a tasty addition in your salad or soothe a painful sunburn.

Friends of the Key Peninsula Library are hoping to draw a crowd at the Key Center Library program set for Aug. 8 at 7 p.m.

For information, contact Rosina Vertz at (253) 548-3309.

KP Lions install concrete tables and benches at Taylor Bay Park

Hugh McMillan, KP News

On Monday, July 15, in its continuing support of the Key Pen Parks, Key Peninsula Lions Club members created another of the club's unique concrete picnic tables and benches on site at the Taylor Bay Park. KP Lions participating in the exercise included Sam Woods, Neal Van der Voorn, and George and Cindy Robison.

KP Lions teams had already established several of the table and bench sets at the new 360 Trails park in the Wauna area and augmented these with concrete "toad stools" to provide spots for hikers and others enjoying the park to relax while wandering the park's trails.

"Trying to burn these in bonfires, or carving graffiti into them, or stealing them will pose a difficult problem for the bad guys," said the project's creator and supervisor, George Robison.

The Lions intend to continue its support of KP Parks well into the future. In the the new 360 Trails, the Lions already have blazed a trail to accommodate the club's annual "first Saturday after the 4th of July" Volksmarch — a 10K (6.2-mile) walk. This year, 100 walkers from Vancouver to Bellingham and Spokane enjoyed the newly cut trail.

For information about the projects and volunteering opportunities, call 884-3319.

4	Pea Gravel 15 tons=30,000 lbs.
5	7/8 Inch Drain Rock 15 tons=30,000 lbs.
6	1 1/2 Inch Drain Rock 15 tons=30,000 lbs.
7	5/8 or 3/4 Inch Minus Crushed Gravel 15 tons=30,000 lbs.
8	1 1/2 Inch Minus Crushed Gravel 15 tons=30,000 lbs.
9	Topsoil 10 square yards
10	Medium Beauty Bark Fresh Bright Orange 10 square yards
11	3/4 Inch Crushed Asphalt 15 tons=30,000 lbs.

When you buy 3/4 minus or 1 1/2 minus crushed gravel, you buy up to half a load crushed all the way down to dirt. This dirt turns into mud and simply washes away. You're left with a half load of rock.

When you buy 3/4 inch or 1 1/2 inch clean gravel, you buy all 3/4 inch or all 1 1/2 inch rock and no dirt. This gravel lasts up to 4 or 5 times longer than the minus. You get more rock for your money!!

Fill in your bigger potholes with 1 1/2 clean. Then cover with 3/4 clean, which will give a smoother ride.

Mindy Wilkins, 20 years as the KP Cutter Bug

By Steve Whitford, KP News

In 1975, Florida girl Mindy Wilkins moved to Key Peninsula.

After 2,400 hours of professional training at Mr. Roberts Beauty School, she qualified for her cosmetologist license in 1984.

After that, Wilkins worked in other shops for about 10 years, but she always wanted her own business. She got her chance in 1994 when the old Red Caboose located near the Vaughn Community Center became available.

Even before the Cutter Bug was officially open, Wilkins got her first customer. A man came in and asked for a haircut and she didn't even have a chair at the time, but her customer was more than willing to get trimmed while seated on the toilet.

Her business later moved to the K.C. Corral, where the Cutter Bug remained for the next seven years.

During this period, Wilkins also worked out of her house and even went mobile when clients needed her to.

She said one of her fondest memories of that time was a day she spent at Camp Sey-

Mindy and Bob Wilkins recently celebrated 20 years of service at the Cutter Bug.

Bob Wilkins, Mindy's husband, who is also her bookkeeper and general handyman. She confessed, "He was my first true love." Time and distance separated them and they went their separate ways until five years ago, when chance reunited them, they have been together ever since.

As a cosmetologist, Wilkins cuts, perms and colors hair for men, women and children.

In addition, her shop provides an excellent supply of high-end hair products from the Paul Mitchell brand including: It's a Ten, Hempz, Bed Head, Tea Tree, Joico and American Crew. Wilkins said that special orders are always welcome and only take a week to come in.

The Cutter Bug is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and by special appointment on Sundays.

"My clients and community are like family to me. I know almost everyone and I make every effort to meet their needs," Wilkins said.

For information, call Wilkins at (253) 225-8117 or check out her Facebook page, Cutter Bug Salon and Beauty Supply.

Scout builds picnic tables for KP Civic Center

By Colleen Slater

Evan Pernu chose building picnic tables for the KP Civic Center as his Eagle Scout project.

"I wanted to do something for the Civic Center because we meet there weekly and use the facility for free," Pernu said.

He asked KPCC caretaker James Allyn what needed to be done, and building tables was something he thought he'd enjoy doing. He knew he could get help from his dad as well as troop leader Mark Burris, a skilled carpenter.

Pernu, a junior at Gig Harbor High School, had lots of help from troop and family members and constructed seven new picnic tables, already in use at the Civic Center.

Cynthia (Radonich) Walters

Oct. 19, 1949 - June 6, 2013

Cynthia (Radonich) Walters died on June 6, 2013 in Wenatchee, Wash. Her daughters were at her side. Walters, 63, was a daughter of Marge and Dick Radonich, lifelong residents of Longbranch.

Walters was a 1967 graduate of Peninsula High School and graduated from Western Washington University with a teaching certificate. She taught English, drama and debate at Bainbridge and Port Angeles high schools.

Walters is survived by her mother, Marge Radonich; daughters, Heidi Jackson and Molly McAllister; sister, Becky Olsen; her grandchildren, Harper, Vianne, August and Beckett; and her niece, Gretchen Olsen. She was preceded in death by her father, Richard L. Radonich and her sister, Robin L. Radonich.

A memorial was held for Cindy on June 29 at Longbranch Community Church.

The family thanks Pastor Arlyce Kretschman for blessings, guidance and care of the family, Longbranch Ruth Circle for snacks, Claudia Loy (Cindy's cousin) from Sunnycrest Nursery for remarkable floral arrangements, and all the friends and family for prayers and support for making it easier to get through such a sad time. They will miss her angelic voice and joyful laughter.
