Dreams come true for KP teen

By Scott Turner, KP News

Sometimes dreams really do come true. Josh Loux, 17, was diagnosed with cystic fibrosis (CF) when he was just three months old.

CF is a relatively rare disease that, basically, causes thick mucus to build up in the lungs and pancreas, which leads to life-threatening lung infections and digestive problems.

Currently, there's no cure for CF and, because it's so rare, not as much money is dedicated toward research as with, say, cancer and other high-visibility diseases.

Similarly, organizations such as the well-known Make-A-Wish Foundation have given more attention to children with cancer than those with CF.

But that's changing. Earlier this year, Josh's family received a phone call from the Make-A-Wish Foundation's Seattle office that, after having been flatly denied a few years ago, his wish was being granted.

Josh's mom, Deedee Loux, remembers

Josh Loux, 17, was granted a wish by the Make-A-Wish Foundation. Instead of a location or meeting a celebrity, the Wanua-area teen chose to receive a special gift — a Gibson, Les Paul guitar. Loux has cystic fibrosis, a rare disease, and will be walking in the annual Great Strides Walk in Gig Harbor, May 3.

KP medical marijuana community faces state smokescreen

By Peter Ruble, KP News

The medical marijuana community is flourishing in the Key Peninsula region despite the fact that marijuana collective gardens are illegal in Washington state, according to a statement made by the Washington State Court of Appeals on March 31.

A medical marijuana collective garden is a place where those who provide medical marijuana can help those who currently do not grow or have their own. This community could be in further danger if new laws are enacted in the summer of 2014 that would put the State Liquor Control Board in charge of dispensing marijuana for medical and recreational use.

Nick Hetterscheidt, who manages the Key Peninsula Healing Center collective garden off of State Route 302, claims that new marijuana laws will end his business. Hetterscheidt runs what he calls a safe environment for marijuana in a "clinical" setting.

"The state sees our customers as theirs," said Hetterscheidt. "They're looking for revenue and couldn't care less about the patients. They want to keep it as a recreational drug and would rather have it classified like cigarettes and alcohol and they want to put medical marijuana users on a state registry list."

He has seen medical marijuana effectively treat sleep disorders, anxiety, depression, and has witnessed it help cancer patients who were struggling to regain their appetites. "It's less addictive than prescription drugs and it works instantly," Hetterscheidt said.

Jamie Chaplin, who is a member of the Key Peninsula Healing Center, says that medical marijuana has effectively treated her husband's depression and bipolar disorder. Chaplin says that her husband was not responding to prescription drugs and was suffering from their side effects before using medical marijuana.

Cholon French, who owns Harbor Alternative Wellness in Purdy, said that medical marijuana is 100 times safer than prescription medication. "It's been a blessing for me and my patients," said French, who has treated people suffering from Crohn's disease and fibromyalgia. French also uses marijuana to treat his own back pain.

Harbor Alternative Wellness provides smokeless methods of using marijuana such as brownies, candy, soft drinks, dog treats and vaporizers. Vaporizers are metal or glass devices that help extract THC, the principal psychoactive ingredient in marijuana, while eliminating the harmful carcinogens caused by smoking.

"I switched to vaporizing and it's awesome," said Chris Hetterscheidt, who manages a smoke shop named The Glass Cave near Key Center that sells vaporiz-ers and other smoking devices.

Hetterscheidt said he uses marijuana to treat his nausea and has seen disabled veterans and cancer patients come into his shop frequently.

According to Hetterscheidt, most doctors receive kickbacks from pharmaceutical companies for prescribing their medication when medical marijuana could make it unnecessary.

what a shock it was when she and her husband learned that their new baby, the second of their three children, had CF.

"It's a genetic disease where both parents have to be a carrier and there's no family history on either side of our family," she said. "We have an older son, Christopher, 19 and he's fine. And our daughter Aleisha, 14, is also OK."

It took awhile, but once the doctors got him on the right mix of medications, nutrition and physical therapy, Josh has been able to live a pretty normal life.

"He was growing and thriving and doing well," Loux said. "We had one little hiccup — a near drowning — where we almost lost him when he was 2, but I feel like the Lord spared him and has great things in mind for him."

Josh grew up using a vest machine every day to tap the fluid from his lungs, did physical therapy and was careful with his diet. There have been "a lot of doctor appointments and just keeping a close watch on his health," but other than that life was fairly normal, his mother said.

"Most of my friends didn't even know I have CF," Josh Loux said. "It was different, but not that different. I knew I was sick because I grew up with it and I never knew anything else.

"I could run and play and I was one of the kids that got picked first for a dodgeball game," he said.

Then about four years ago, a micobacteria colonized in his lungs. "It's really tough to cure and it doesn't go away," his mom said. "He's had cocktails of antibiotics sometimes four-to-six months at a time and he had to have a port put into an artery so we could treat him that way."

He went from "about 106 percent lung capacity" before the infection to about 43 percent, he said. Now, there are some things he just can't do. "I can't even go a mile without coughing and having issues. I try to live life as normal as I can, but I take naps like a little kid because I'm just really tired," he said.

The bacteria is nasty enough that Josh has to go into the hospital a couple of times a year and he goes to a specialist to get certain types of antibiotics that come from the FDA, he said.

Recently, however, Josh started working out with his friend, Mac Davis. "He's been training with me and working with me. We do some running and we do weights," Josh said.

He said he put on about four pounds since they started, which made his doctors really happy. It's also helping him use the air he breathes in more efficiently.

The Loux family also participates together in Gig Harbor's annual Great Strides Walk for Cystic Fibrosis. Their team is called "Josh on the Go."

According to Heather Paulson, the local Great Strides Walk chair, this year's three-mile walk takes place on May 3 on the Cushman Trail. Paulson, whose 10-year-old daughter, Lily Grace, was born with CF, has chaired the event for the past five years.

"And out on the Key Peninsula there are families raising money for Josh. The only thing stopping us from finding the cure is money. We need more awareness and more help," Paulson said.

The Loux family has lived on the Key Peninsula for four generations. "My grandparents lived here, my parents and I all grew up here," Deedee Loux said. "It's such a great community. When something bad happens, everybody rallies around."

When Josh was first nominated three years ago, he was having a tough time with the micobacteria, and when he learned that he had been "flat-out denied," he was pretty angry.

"That hurt me a lot and I was like, 'Why do the cancer kids get everything?'"

It was an unusual attitude for him, because Josh is very sensitive and cares deeply about other people who are ill, and never wishes bad things for anyone, said his mom.

"I was angry for the many kids who have CF who are younger than me and have a worse situation. It would be a really hard thing to deal with when you're 4 or 5," he said.

But "as of Feb. 1, Make-A-Wish now grants wishes to all CF children," said Jeanette Tarcha, the chapter's director of communications. "We're starting with the oldest kids first — the ones who are getting close to 18 — and Josh is one of our first CF recipients," she added.

Josh has played the guitar for a dozen years and his wish was for a certain, very special guitar. And he got exactly what he was dreaming about, plus a day in Seattle with friends at the Experience Music Project and a nice lunch.

And another of his wishes also was granted. "To have Make-A-Wish do this for me shows me that they will also do it for the younger kids who are CF patients. And that makes me really, really happy," he added with a big grin.

For information about Make-A-Wish, visit akwa.wish.org. To learn more about the Great Strides Walk for Cystic Fibrosis, email Heather Paulson at hpspander@hotmail.com.

PSD developing STEM opportunities

STEM education has become a statewide and nationwide priority for early learning through postsecondary education — and Peninsula School District is part of the movement to enhance student learning through STEM based opportunities.

A strong foundation in STEM — science, technology, engineering and mathematics — is becoming increasingly necessary for today’s students.

“Even if they’re not going into a STEM field, they need to be STEM literate in order to communicate and collaborate in the global workforce,” said Dr. Kareen Borders, a National Board Certified Teacher in early adolescence science at Key Peninsula Middle School.

Borders, who last year was one of six full-time teaching ambassadors appointed to the U.S. Department of Education, was recently invited by the Committee on Space Research (COSPAR) to present on the education panel at an international scientific assembly.

The event will take place in Moscow, Russia, this summer (funded personally and by grants) and she will talk about the various immersive science activities PSD has created for its students and how other countries can replicate the scientist-student partnerships.

One of her examples will be a pilot project launched recently between KPMS and Peninsula High School. KPMS eighth-graders and PHS AP chemistry students in David Stitt’s class are collaborating on experiments, discussing results via Skype.

“It’s an opportunity for my students to do advanced science at the middle school level and a great way to take advantage of vertical partnering so the kids can ramp up their thinking,” she said. “For the high school students, it’s a way to learn better by teaching the material. I am also very fortunate to partner with Mr. Stitt, who is a great chemistry mentor and a role model for students.”

Peninsula School District recently created a steering committee to review national, state and local developments in STEM education and identify new possibilities for PSD students.

“We want to develop a STEM mission and vision for the district,” Borders said. “We need to find more immersive, embedded opportunities to connect students with real-world science.”

KPMS eighth-graders work on a calorimeter lab and collaborate with AP chemistry students at Peninsula High School, conducting the same experiments and discussing results.

Cyber Safety for Parents Only

Snapchat, Twitter, Ask.fm, and more – oh my! What are these new animals and how do we tame them?

Lynn Kolp, of Safety for the 21st Century, will give parents the knowledge needed to help children make sound decisions for protecting their digital reputation and personal safety. Please join Lynn in the Henderson Bay High School Commons, 6-8 p.m. on May 15 for a free presentation.

You are welcome to bring laptops, tablets and smartphones for a hands-on experience. Due to limited seating, please RSVP to (253) 530-1003 or richardsj@psd401.net.

This cyber safety presentation is brought to you by the PSD Parenting Digital Natives Committee.

Information on August Ballot

As many community members know, a bond and a contingent levy measure will appear on the Aug. 5 election ballot. The $60 million bond would pay for a new elementary school in the Gig Harbor North area; a replacement of Artondale Elementary; health, safety and security improvements throughout the district; replacement of fields and tracks; modernization of Key Peninsula Middle School; and upgrades to middle school science classrooms.

The $55.9 million contingent levy is similar in scope. The levy’s scope would be reduced at Key Peninsula Middle School to upgrades and fire flow, and technology would be added. The levy is contingent, because if both the bond and levy pass, only the technology portion of the levy would be collected. The cost of the bond is about $0.92 per $1,000 of assessed value and the technology part of the levy is $0.04 per $1,000 of assessed value.

The following links at www.psd401.net contain materials presented at the most recent community meetings. New materials will be added as available, so check back often.

- Resolution No. 14-01 General Bond Obligation
- Resolution No. 14-02 Capital Projects and Technology Levy

Evergreen students thank drivers - Recently, Evergreen Elementary students thanked their bus drivers. We applaud their efforts and join them in praise of our Transportation Department. Here are some fun facts about PSD Transportation:

- We employ 68 bus drivers, 20 substitute drives, 6 mechanics and 5 office staff. Compared to other districts, we serve an extremely large geographic area covering 120 square miles on the Gig Harbor and Key Peninsulas.
- Combining our regular and special education runs, our high schools generate 50 runs per day. Our middle schools generate 57 and our elementary schools generate 64 runs a day. In addition to their AM and PM routes, a driver may also pick up field trips, sport or activity runs.
- We travel 1,555,852 miles per year. That is the equivalent of 1,482 round trips to Disneyland, 558 round trips to the White House or 3.3 round trips to the moon!

We are grateful to our transportation team for their efforts to keep students safe while starting and ending their days with a smile.

The top 5 reasons to grow your own food this year

Spring is here and the sun is shining more often, which means many of us are spending time in our gardens.

While choosing between flowers, herbs, fruits and vegetables, I'd like to encourage you to plant plenty of your own food this year. Even if you only grow one tomato plant, there are many reasons to grow at least some of your own food. Here are my top five:

1: Food from the garden tastes better.

Aside from the many health-related and socially responsible reasons to grow your own food, fruits and veggies from the garden simply taste better. They are juicier and sweeter than anything you will ever buy at the grocery store.

There is nothing like eating a tomato ripe off the vine and warm from the sun, the juice drizzling down your chin. A sweet onion will never be as sweet as one grown in your garden. You may even find that you like veggies you had previously written off, because they are sweeter when grown in your soil.

2: Food from the garden is healthier.

The nutrient and mineral content of garden-grown veggies is much higher than anything in the grocery store, which will heal and prevent many medical issues.

Food picked ripe from the vine is full of digestive enzymes that help you digest your food properly. Food from the grocery store has been irradiated, or zapped in a big microwave to kill these enzymes so they don't spoil as quickly, adding unnecessary stress to your body.

You will control which pesticides are used, if any. You will decide if you grow GMO or organic. The quality of your food is in your hands.

3: Growing your food will save you

Monica Rakowski Living Close to Nature money.

The cost of living is rising, including the cost of food. Sure, you can spend a fortune on your garden, but you can also use sustainable gardening methods that are close to free.

By using practices such as composting, mulching with wood chips, and saving seeds, you can eat delicious healthy food that only costs you the time it takes to grow them.

4: Growing your own food is good for the environment.

There is a movement to buy local for good reason. Buying local reduces our dependence on fossil fuels and eliminates the pollution created when transporting our produce. There's nothing more local than your backyard.

5: Spending time in the garden connects you to nature.

I'm convinced the worst bad day can be cured by spending time in the garden. Putting your hands in the dirt and feeling sunshine on your skin boosts your mood. Gardening quiets your mind and grounds you. If you watch closely, nature will reveal valuable life lessons while you watch your plants grow. Gardening connects you to your food, to nature and to yourself.

So while choosing your seeds and starts this year, try a few new vegetables you haven't grown before. Your body, spirit, wallet and the planet will thank you.

Is marijuana getting harder to find on the peninsulas?

An emergency motion was passed unanimously by the Gig Harbor City Council on April 14 for a six-month moratorium which would prohibit any marijuana sales businesses within city limits. Emergency motions do not allow for public comment.

The council had been discussing and considering for the past several months new zoning changes which would allow businesses that have state licenses to sell marijuana at strictly controlled, pre-designated locations away from schools and other sensitive locations, with 2,500-foot buffers between individual marijuana stores.

Council members cited conflict in guidance from state agencies, specifically the Washington State Liquor Control Board and the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The Liquor Control Board is scheduled to have a lottery before the end of April to determine which applicants receive licenses from the state to sell marijuana for recreational use.

In January, the State Attorney General ruled that county and municipal governments are allowed to establish zoning requirements and prohibitions, as they so choose, concerning the growing, selling and processing of marijuana products. State-issued marijuana licenses cannot override local ordinances.

License applicants who attended the meeting will have an opportunity to address the city council on June 6.

Rick Sorrels The Pragmatic Sophist

Coincidentally, on April 14, the University Place City Council also made a unanimous decision to ban marijuana businesses.

Gig Harbor and University Place have joined with Lakewood, Sumner and unincorporated Pierce County in banning marijuana-related businesses. Irrespective of whatever the local municipal governments decide, marijuana still remains a controlled substance under federal law, which imposes stiff penalties for growing, processing and selling the plant and its products.

State Initiative 502 was passed by the voters which loosened some of the state criminal statutes regarding marijuana, and at the same time established blood levels for driving under the influence of marijuana. Initiative 502 had no effect on federal statutes. The federal congress has taken no action yet to change federal law.

As stated by the DEA officer in an accompanying article, who was involved in the recent raids and arrests on the KP, and in 2011; "The distribution of marijuana is illegal under federal law, without exception" but "our investigation is not targeting those marijuana

Treasures in Barbara's secret garden

If you happen to know where to look, there's a place on Herron Hill that's been touched by magic. It's a place where art and imagination meet. It's also the home of Clifford and Barbara Godbey, where they have lived the past 10 years.

Barbara married Clifford when she was just 18 years old. She's been an art collector ever since, about 46 years. Godbey is moved by a mysterious calling for old things, bold things and odd items that speak to her. She arranges each item, making her yard a virtual collage of inanimate art.

Following along her fence there's an ever changing assortment of stuff, choreographed to fit together. Nearby sits the glass cover from an old street light; a silent sentinel from the past. The next scene sports a rusted pot-belly stove and a large wooden cask; its middle open to reveal a large porcelain angel.

Next to a sundial sits a large wooden display cart, sporting large wooden wagon wheels. The cart was originally used to display some ancient grocer's wares. Now it's festooned with all manner of bric-a-brac; next to that is a 2-foot-high cement bishop from someone's huge outdoor chess set.

There's a weather vane and numerous farm tools in varying states of decay.

"I don't fix things up, I just allow nature to do what it does to things over time," Godbey said with a smile. The centerpiece is a gigantic blue hand that's big enough to sit in the palm. Godbey got it from a now-gone store known as Stewarts Meats. All hands available oddly enough were right hand only. In this kingdom, a large fat frog prince sits complete with a crown and holds court.

The next area is dedicated to times and things gone by. There's an old wood cook stove and oven adorned with pans and glassware from the era.

"My art is a work in progress and will never be complete," Godbey said.

Behind her house is where she keeps surplus items that she hasn't found the right spot for yet. Things like a full-size ceramic deer, statue heads, wagon wheels, bird baths and a veritable cornucopia of stuff.

Godbey's two-acre ranch is covered with so many things of interest it would be impossible to list or remember them all. She finds her treasures everywhere, dumped along the road, in the trash and, of course, garage sales.

"I always know how to get a good bargain," she stated testily, and every one of her keepsakes comes with its own unique story. If all her stories were published, they would fill volumes. Even her plants and flowers were found on the clearance pile.

There's little doubt that on special nights at special times her secret grounds are visited by local spirits and forest folk. One last item not to be overlooked is the star of Godbey's secret show. He stands majestically in the center of her front yard. His name is Bob and he's a Bigfoot.

providers that are complying with the letter and spirit of existing state law?"

The Feds are focusing primarily on the growing, selling and processing of marijuana products, along with sales to minors and exposure to children. There currently exists a certain degree of tolerance for recreational use among federal agencies, provided individuals comply with state statutes.

Meanwhile, state regulatory officials in Washington and Colorado are considering strictly enforced limits to the amount of marijuana extract in food and beverage products, responding to deaths where 10 to 100 times a normal "dose" of active ingredient was ingested.

Our recent "wild west" approach to marijuana seems to be tightening. Discussion in the Legislature is to combine the recreational and medical use statutes with oversight by the Liquor Control Board.

The Feds are watching, waiting to pounce if we do not do it right. Recent advertisements on Craig's List include a marijuana delivery service for medical marijuana users on the KP, a hopeful winner of the marijuana lottery on the KP advertising for investors, and another hopeful in South Kitsap looking for partners for a drive-thru recreational marijuana stand that looks just like a barista stand.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

I am grateful for the honor to represent the 2014 Key Peninsula good citizens.

The recognition has granted me many delightful moments already and has affirmed the prestige of our Key Peninsula Lions' Club and this awards event.

Most of all I wish to express my gratitude for the extraordinary work of our KP Lions to produce the Citizen of the Year awards ceremony.

For 30 years they have worked to present nominees at their ceremony and in the KP News, celebrating the magnitude of work done and a multitude of Key Pen good citizens. Reading about the contributions of the nominees assures the values and lifestyle of our KP neighbors.

Thank you, KP Lions, for reminding us every year that the KP is a wonderful place to live. I'm sure that Hugh McMillan would tell us, "It's the best place on the planet."

Danna Webster is KP 'Citizen of the Year'

KP News staff report

All of the 150 people who attended the KP Lions Club 30th annual Key Peninsula Citizens of the Year Awards banquet this year gave a standing ovation to Danna Webster, the KP Citizen of the Year 2013/14.

Webster, who started visiting the Key Peninsula in 2001, decided to call the home in 2003.

She immediately got involved with the newly formed Key Peninsula Community Council where she has served as a member since its inception in 2004. She is currently serving her fourth-term as council president.

In her influential role as chair, she has initiated forums on a variety of topics including transportation safety, an annual candidates' night in October, and land use and emergency preparedness. She has been instrumental in engaging the community in interesting and timely discussions.

Webster was instrumental in forming the annual Farm Tour, which she chaired for several years and is currently serving as the tour's treasurer. In 2013, the tour attracted a record number of visitors to the Key Peninsula from all around Western Washington.

Webster also is an active participant in the KP Writer's Guild, the KPC Youth Council, the KP Historical Museum and many other KP organizations including reporting for the KP News.

Most recently, she spearheaded the effort to maintain the KP Bus Connects transportation program through the 2013 KP Council assumption of the grant program.

According to event organizers, Webster's leadership and participation has made a difference on the Key Peninsula. She has provided opportunities for elected officials to visit for public discussions and important citizen input.

In a letter to KP Lions Club, Webster thanked them for the honor of allowing her to represent the 2014 Key Peninsula good citizens.

"The recognition has granted me many delightful moments and has affirmed the prestige regarded toward our Key Peninsula Lions' Club and this awards event. I wish to express my gratitude for your extraordinary work as our KP Lions to produce the Citizens of the Year awards ceremony.

"Thank you for reminding us every year that the KP is a wonderful place to live," Webster said.

Mentors of the Month

Selected by Communities In Schools of Peninsula

Reading Mentor: Gerry Baldwin

Gerry Baldwin has been a math mentor and volunteer with Communities In Schools of Peninsula (CIS) for over eight years. He is also a member of the CIS Board and a math teacher at CPS. Gerry has helped shape CIS in what is today a successful after-school program. Gerry recently found the time to mentor high school kids on complex math and even on their own. Gerry is proud of his kids as he says, "My kids go from a 21 to a 27 and advance one to two grade levels after one hour a week of tutoring in school year. If I have to mentor, anybody else!" Our profound thanks goes to Gerry for all his dedication and feedback. The communities in schools you can't live without!

—Communities In Schools

Reading Mentor: David Roskoph

David Roskoph has been a reading mentor at Meier Creek Elementary for four years. "You have the chance to be that one special person in that child's life," David explained. "I have a choice in helping our community. I would rather spend my time on fixing the problem where it starts. For every dollar invested in Communities In Schools, $11.65 returns to the community by savings in education programs. We make a positive impact on the child, and then you see important results like when you see a kid who is in a 4th grade reading level. We are a hero to us. Thank you and keep up the inspiring work!"

—Communities In Schools

These dedicated volunteers donate an hour a week to help kids in our community achieve success in reading and math. Can you help too? Call 253-884-5733 to volunteer.

Mentors of the Month

Selected by Communities In Schools of Peninsula

Reading Mentor: Ann Holder

Ann Holder has been reading mentor for nine years at Anacortes Elementary. It is a great elementary school in southern California for 52 years. "She and her husband traveled the lands of their children on the island for 20 years ago. Ann said, "My child was having trouble, so I started his regular reading club, and I thought, opening my teachers words would help confirm his learning. He was excited!" "Everyday grown-ups need to learn too!" she explained. "Having a child's face light up when they correctly read a word makes me proud on every day, they feel so proud of themselves. "As a contrast, "You feel their joy of learning. Reading to me, Ann is a dedicated member who gives the extra mile for the kids. For this we are forever grateful, thank you Ann!"

—Communities In Schools

Math Mentor: Fred Angus

Fred Angus has been a math mentor for 10 years at Ferry Elementary for three years. Fred is a native Washingtonian and moved to the Key Peninsula 11 years ago, with his wife, who is a teacher at Puyallup Elementary. Fred gives high marks to Communities In Schools for its excellent mentoring program. "It was a gift! Thank you!"

"I get kids who really want to succeed and are struggling. I like to give them a hand. It makes me feel good to see them go and to help them make progress," explained Fred. Fred makes his own time to come in and get involved with mentoring. "It's a lot of fun and a great benefit," he explained. "The Key Peninsula has been good to me, and I'm going back to my community." We couldn't be more pleased that you are giving back. Fred. Keep up the great work!"

Conservation group receives generous gift

By Alice Kinerk, KP News

Mahncke Road, a quiet dead-end road which traces the north shore of the Filucy Bay in Longbranch, begins with a sharp incline — a wooded stretch where no houses are visible for nearly a quarter mile, then it flattens into a leafy straightaway.

A few years back a sign appeared on the waterfront side of the road, halfway up the hill.

A development group in Seattle had purchased the land and was planning to turn it into the site of eight new homes. A map on the sign showed how the houses would line the waterfront, carving nearly 50 acres of unspoiled second-growth forest into eight privately-owned lots. There was a number to call if you were interested in buying a house.

Apparently, the idea didn't sit well with everyone. A few months after the sign appeared, an anonymous donor purchased all 46 acres of land with the intention of finding a way to conserve it.

Great Pierce Conservancy was thrilled to help.

The pristine, intact land is home to a variety of animals and has tremendously high ecological value.

"We had actually targeted this property before the landowner came to us," said Scott Pascoe, Conservation director for Great Pierce Conservancy.

He said the parcel is a high priority for conservation because of the habitat it provides. "Our plans are to preserve it to perpetuity," Pascoe said.

Great Pierce Conservancy is a private, non-profit land trust. They work to identify areas around the peninsula that protect water resources and retain high-quality habitat. These become their highest priority for conservation, Pascoe said.

With a pebbly shore shaded by maples and conifers 60 or more years old, and edged by a shallow tidal channel, the land makes a natural refuge for salmon fry. A great variety of birds make their homes in the tall trees and small mammals utilize the cover of brush to hide from predators.

According to the Conservancy, this arrangement of nature is surprisingly rare in the South Sound. In a recent report analyzing the Gig Harbor, Key Peninsula and Nisqually shorelines, the pristine, intact acreage of Filucy Bay's north cove was cited as being within the top 3 percent of nearshore areas for habitat value.

Erin Ewald, KGI Watershed Program Manager for Pierce Conservation District, sees the newly-donated land as part of a larger effort to influence landowners to be good stewards to their land.

"This gift, not only to Great Pierce Conservancy, but the community, will give a huge boost to ongoing efforts by partners including the Pierce Conservation District to work with nearby property owners to implement best management practices on their own lands.

"This news by Great Pierce Conservancy was a tremendous morale lift. I hope that we can all continue to work together to see this vision of stewardship and wise land use grow," Ewald added.

Great Pierce Conservancy continues to look at properties around the Key Peninsula, including non-waterfront land, for conservation purposes. The group is very interested in land located in the Filucy Bay watershed.

In the end, credit goes to the anonymous donor. "I cannot say enough 'thanks' to the generous donor for making this happen," Ewald said.

FISH food bank opens

The FISH food bank formerly located in Key Center that opened for business on March 28 at its new location in the LDS church parking lot located at 12521 134th Ave. KPN, near the Elgin-Clifton "Y".

Food will be distributed to any who ask, every Friday from 2 to 7 p.m., and every Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A semi-tractor and trailer, with walk-through access, sporting two freezer and two refrigerator units, will be used to keep meat, vegetables, eggs and dairy products fresh and is set up at its new location.

Organizers said that Fridays have seen 25 to 30 families served, Saturdays about 15 families.

VOTE YES TWICE For Peninsula Schools

Ballots Arrive July 18th, Due August 5th, 2014

YES! PROP#1 BOND

Bond to Fix Critical Needs

Key Peninsula Schools are the "Pride of the Peninsula" and we want to keep it that way! The bond will modernize Key Peninsula Middle School and address overcrowding and critical needs at ALL schools.

School Board Listened and Acted. Bond Reflects Your Priorities.

- Lower cost
- More money to modernize KPMS
- Avoid the cost of a special election

YES! PROP#2 LEVY

Levy to Address Technology

If both the bond and the contingent levy pass, the levy will only finance our schools' technology needs.

Contingent Levy Pays For

- Complete major infrastructure projects at all schools
- Begin replacing computers at all schools
- Add mobile technology at all schools, such as tablets and Chromebooks

Why Are We Voting YES for Both?

Saying YES to BOTH means we will receive $60M from the bond for capital projects and the CONTINGENT LEVY WILL CONVERT TO A $2M Levy for TECHNOLOGY upgrades.

Saying YES to BOTH measures would keep your tax increase to about $0.96 cents per $1,000 of assessed property value, finance much needed projects throughout the district, and maintain stable low tax rates for the foreseeable future.

PSD buses undergo thorough state inspection

By Peter Ruble, KP News

The Washington State Patrol did its annual inspection of Peninsula School District's fleet of 90 buses between April 13 and 17.

Every aspect of the buses was examined thoroughly, including steering, brakes, lights, emergency doors and more.

According to Peninsula School District shop foreman Joel Schroeder, 3.5 percent of the buses were declared "out of service."

The bus drivers do a pre-inspection twice daily of the breaks, doors and lights. Schroeder and his team do an inspection every 60 days to ensure the Washington State Patrol has as little to worry about as possible.

According to Schroeder, his inspection is "brutal" in its thoroughness and is held to a very high standard.

"We jack up the front of the bus and inspect the dome lights, seats for tears, buzzers, steering, rock chips larger than a nickel, trip hazards, steering, leaks in the exhaust and all emergency doors," Schroeder said.

According to PSD Director of Transportation Annie Bell, the percentage of out of service vehicles is a good percentage, considering the buses cover 120 square miles each day and average 7,000 miles a day. They also encompass 425 daily hours spread among 70 drivers who each drive between four and six hours a day.

Cyber safety class being offered to parents

KP News staff report

Even with all its great advantages such as instant communication and keeping connected with friends and family, there are dangers lurking on the Internet in social media and other websites.

Lynn Kolp wants parents to be aware of the dangers and how to keep their children safe. Kolp knows what she's talking about. She has been in law enforcement for 16 years and now works with South Sound 911.

"Kids need to learn to make responsible choices when they're using the Internet or visiting social media sites," she said.

On May 15 from 6 to 8 p.m., Kolp will present a free workshop at Henderson Bay High School called "Tools and Tactics for Cyber Safety."

Parents and guardians of children on the Key Peninsula will learn much from this presentation, she said.

The class is for parents and guardians only and attendees should bring their iPods, laptops, smart phones or other Internet-accessible devices.

"I'll show them in real time some of the tactics that are used so they can get an idea of how predators can gain access to their children — without the kids even realizing it," Kolp said.

"You don't want to be one of those parents who puts their head in the sand when something bad happens that could have been prevented," she said. "The excuse that you didn't know what was going on isn't a great defense."

Due to limited seated, pre-registration is required. For information, contact 530-1003 or richardsj@psd401.net.

KP Middle School unveils entry way mural

By Hugh McMillan, KP News

Beginning in January, artist Billy Gray, part of Two Waters Arts Alliance After School Art Club, guided Key Peninsula Middle School students in the creation of an outdoor mural showcasing the flora and fauna of Key Peninsula to grace the entrance to the school. Assisting Gray were professional artist Kathleen Gray and volunteers Kathy Barrett, Sue Stuhaug, Stephanie Flintoff, Molly Duttry, Molly Swensen, and Tacoma Pierce County Health Department volunteer Brittany Langdon.

The project reached fruition with the unveiling of the mural on a sunny Thursday afternoon in April. Its audience consisted of many parents whose kids made it possible and the Peninsula School District board of directors who, after the unveiling, held its special meeting for the public in the school's commons.

PSD Superintendent Chuck Cuzzetto added to the festive event by presenting a weatherproof plaque commemorating the unveiling. Everyone agreed that the mural is beautiful and nicely representative of the school's support of the environment.

Peninsula High School junior Molly Duttry took photos, collected quotes, and even helped on the mural project the art club kids had been working on for five weeks every Tuesday.

"The kids were all excited to be finishing up adding the last details," she said.

"I like this project because in the beginning I did not know how to paint at all," said eighth-grader Aerrow Cruz, "but this project taught me how to paint and have fun while hanging out with friends. The project also teaches teamwork and working together to accomplish a common goal without worrying about the little things."

TWAA president Molly Swensen said that watching students work on the project was inspiring. "They were taught the elements of painting a large-size mural from transferring patterns, putting down base color to putting on finishing detail. Some students told me they had never done any painting or drawing as large as this and they learned a lot," she said. "The KPMS mural will be a legacy for the school as well as the students for years to come."

KPMS sixth-grader Johnathan Beal said the project was enjoyable. "I like doing things like this because I'm doing it for other people and not just me," he said. Classmate Sarah Catterall said, "I want to be an artist; this made me want to be one. I hope it inspires potential artists to pursue their dreams."

Billy Gray noted, "I thoroughly enjoyed my time working on the KPMS mural. We had a lot of fun, yet worked hard. Students learned a few things about handling acrylic paints, various brushes and blenders with the use of light, shadow and color. All in all, a great experience."

Local high schools race for first time as a team

By Hugh McMillan, KP News

On the first Sunday in April, the rains stopped long enough for a successful second running of the Washington Student League bike races on trails in Key Peninsula's 360 Trails park. Last year's event was on hot, dry, dusty trails. This year, trails did not erupt in billows of dust as bike riders flashed over them.

Race officials were pleased that this year's event started at the new Key Pen Park's "Gateway Park," which is contiguous to and affords access to the 360 Trails Park. On the latter, assembling the large number of bikes, riders, support equipment and personnel last year was uncomfortably crowded. So much so that organizers were reconsidering future use of 360. Gateway, on the other hand, has vast-open fields to assemble whatever is needed. Everybody was happy.

For the first time in the event's history, the local community entered a team in the competitions.

"All members are part of the new Peninsula Composite mountain bike team that formed this year as part of the Washington Student League (washington-league.org)," said the new team's coach, Andrew Hosford. "We have two more races this year and we are looking forward to growing for next season and hopefully adding girls to the team."

He said riders are encouraged to join and enjoy mountain biking and try racing when they feel comfortable.

"So far, we have three racers and eight informal team members," he said.

Hosford teaches journalism at Peninsula High School, which boasts the award-winning high school newspaper, The Outlook, rated as one of the finest such publications in the nation. Hosford is also the school's yearbook advisor.

For information about the Peninsula Composite mountain bike race team, contact Hosford at hosforda@psd401.net.

Seeing Yellow?

Why all of the bright yellow in my neighborhood?
 This summer and fall you may notice men and women in our service area sporting yellow clothing and carrying hand-held computers, cameras, and GPS devices. They will be looking at utility poles and other Peninsula Light Co. equipment in your neighborhood.

What are they doing?
 They are here to conduct an inventory of our electrical system and record the location, condition, and photograph each piece of equipment using special GPS tools. The information will be stored in an electronic map called a Geospatial Information System (GIS). Having this type of data will greatly improve our response to outages and improve service to our members in many other ways.

Who are they?
 These experts are with the Davey Resource Group, an industry leader in this field. They are easily identifiable—look for bright yellow clothing and vehicles marked with the DRG logo and the Peninsula Light Company logo. They will also be carrying identification that confirms they are employees of Davey Resource Group working for PenLight. As they move through the 100+ square miles of our service area we will provide updates to keep you informed of their work locations.

Who can I contact for more information?

Friends help mend Lakebay Marina Resort

By Hugh McMillan, KP News

In early April, Mark and Cindy Scott, co-owners of the Lakebay Marina Resort, hosted a “by contribution only” pancake breakfast with all the trimmings. It was a fundraiser to help defray unanticipated cost overruns in their efforts to resuscitate the landmark facility. Scores of enthusiastic supporters flocked to the site to help.

Among the marina’s many supporters, 13 boats of the Tacoma Power Squadron spent two nights there under the leadership of Commander Tim Craig and his wife, Linda. They joined scads of Key Peninsula citizens at the breakfast. All want the marina brought back to its former glory days, a time when it hosted a multitude of yacht clubs from around the Sound and even Canadian waters at dinner dances to live music.

Tim Craig said, “The owners and (we) put on a nice breakfast to help with the cost of getting this marina going again. My uncle Riney and aunt Bernie owned the marina in the ‘60s. Everything (that is) here, my uncle put here. My mom, Inez, and aunt Bernie worked in the kitchen and sold breakfasts and lunches to the community. Some of my cousins and neighborhood kids worked the docks and we had gas here, too. I have many great memories of this place.”

Speaking for 23 members of the visiting Tacoma Power Squadron, Larry and Cindy Warren wrote, “We have been teaching boating education since 1939. Our older boaters always came here and always spoke of the good times and great scenery. ... The Tacoma Power Squadron has adopted the marina and comes once a year with a work party to help out.”

All the proceeds from the breakfast went toward satisfying requirements from the Pierce County Health Department, according to the Warrens.

Dennis Stuhau of Longbranch said, “We’ve been stopping here for 30 years. We need the marina as part of the heart, business and social life of our community.”

Pierce County Councilman Stan Fleming, who has been a supporter of the marina, said he used to love spending warm summer days as a boy at the marina in Steilacoom.

“Like Lakebay Marina, it was old and reflective of life along these shores,” he said. “Lakebay Marina is a local treasure and historic icon in our community. Preserving it is crucial to ensuring a part of our past is preserved for current and future generations.

“Mark and Cindy Scott have done a superb job capturing the ambiance and spirit of the marina’s life,” he added. “Now, we need to step up to help ensure that it is preserved. It’s like standing on the one-yard line in the fourth quarter and they’re in need of a 12th-man rally. It’s our community, our history, and I urge everyone to help cross the goal line.”

Cindy Scott said she and her husband were grateful about the tremendous support they’ve received from the community. “Without this wonderful community, there would be no us,” she said.

Fuchsia Society holds plant sale at Civic Center

The Lakebay Fuchsia Society will be setting up its 19th annual Mother’s Day Plant Sale at the Key Peninsula Civic Center on Saturday May 10, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

They will be selling fuchsia varieties in sizes from starts to full-blooming baskets, and there will be a wide selection of perennials and annuals for sun or shade gardens.

Organizers said there will also be a variety of farm and nursery vendors selling vegetable, herb and annual starts as well as a selection of interesting plants.

The Lakebay Fuchsia Society welcomes new members and visitors to their meetings on the first Thursday of the month at 7 p.m., at the Key Peninsula Library.

PHS debate team goes to nationals

By Hugh McMillan, KP News

Peninsula High School's Speech and Debate Team took top honors at the Washington Individual Events Meet, a national qualifier, at the University of Puget Sound in March.

The team's coach, PHS math teacher Sheri Ahlheim, said, "As far as we can check — at least 30 years back — for the first time, PHS sent two debate teams to state and is sending a debate team to nationals."

The meet, hosted over two weekends — one for individual events and one for debate — involved an estimated 500 students from across the state.

"In each individual event in which our team competed, there were about 50 entries," Ahlheim said. "There were 32 public-forum debate teams."

PHS senior JC Romero took first place in dramatic interpretation in which he acted out scenes from the book "The Yellow Birds," a soldier's experiences in Iraq. Audrey Gainey took 11th in impromptu speaking, with students being presented with a topic and composing a speech on the spot. Alec Dionne and Dylan Jensen placed sixth in the public-forum debate.

"Our district is regarded as one of the most competitive in the state," Ahlheim said. "Team members Alec and Dylan joined a Puyallup team in winning the national berths. They will travel to Overland Park, Kan., for the national meet June 15-20. At stake, aside from school history and pride, are thousands of dollars in scholarships."

Team member Aaron Krueger said, "State was a great growing experience. We went up against very admirable teams with greatly varied skills and tactics and had to adapt to a wide array of different judges with different backgrounds, ages and expectations. Debates were tough, but fulfilling, I felt honored to be there among the Northwest's best."

To help pay for the nationals, among other things, team members and supporters are selling $10 tickets for an Applebee's pancake breakfast with all the trimmings from 8 to 10 a.m. Saturday, May 17.

Jensen said the state competition was a stressful but challenging and exhilarating experience. His partner, Dionne, added, "It's been Dylan's and my goal to go to state. It was amazing. Making nationals was unexpected, but not unwelcome. We are excited and working hard to raise money for nationals."

Gainey competed in both dramatic interpretation and impromptu and said the state meet had a different atmosphere from other tournaments.

According to Ahlheim, PHS had seven teams competing this year, part of a much larger and more active team than in the past.

"There's enough talent and depth that we will continue to grow and become even more competitive over the years," she said. "They work together and develop strategies, collect and share evidence, support each other."

"We are determined to get to Kansas City," she added. "I am so proud of them; even more because most will be back and more awesome next year."

CIVIC CENTER CORNER

Creating a Stronger Community

Bruce Macdonald, Key Peninsula Civic Center Association, Treasurer
 Macdonald has been a board member at the Key Peninsula Civic Center Association since the early 1990's and was president from 2008-2012.

First things first: at the April 10th Key Peninsula Civic Center Association Board meeting, a new mission statement was approved:

"The Key Peninsula Civic Center Association, through its facility and the effort of its members, fosters and promotes the civic, social, cultural and general well-being of the Key Peninsula community."

Second, you will find, contained within the pages of this edition of the KP News, an article about our annual spring event, the Key Peninsula Livable Community Fair (LCF). We hope you'll take the time to give the story a look and then visit the livable fair on May 10th.

The LCF fits our mission so well, and we are both happy and proud to bring it to you. But, we couldn't, and don't, do it alone. This seems the perfect opportunity to mention and celebrate those longtime sponsors that help bring us to this 13th Annual Key Peninsula Livable Community Fair.

At the Civic Center we strive to give back to our sponsors whenever, and whatever, we can. It's how this is supposed to work. However, we are always worried that we don't do enough and that they might go under-appreciated and they should never be under-appreciated!

It seems that Peninsula Light Co. is there for us every time we approach them and, more often than not, they approach us with support and initiatives of their own. They underwrite, donate equipment and materials, and are responsible for bringing these venerable old buildings into the new century with modern lighting, solar panels and such.

Equally as important to our successes, and to our growth, for that matter, is Key Peninsula Parks. Besides their events and programming conducted at the Civic Center, they include us as part of their Parks Appreciation Day, as if we were one of their own.

Key Pen Parks brought us the new playground and the picnic shelter. We may have provided the space, but it was their idea, and they made sure it happened.

We don't know what the Key Peninsula, or what the Civic Center, would do without the Angel Guild. There isn't enough space to list all the funding we have received from them over the years; most recently, however, they helped to fund the building of the picnic shelter.

How great is it to have an enterprise that takes their profits and puts those funds right back into the community through sponsorships and granting? They would get our vote for Citizen of the Year, every year.

What a difference the Food Market at Key Center has made to the peninsula! Central to the peninsula, with a modern and extensive grocery, they also sponsor many of the major events up and down the Key-Pen Highway including the Livable Community Fair and our Golf Tournament. They allow us space in their parking lot for our firework stand, one of our major sources of annual income. They have even been known to deliver supplies to events if something is running low!

We could keep going, and we should keep going, because there are still more to thank. That's what so great about the KP. We'll need to do this again for all our other great supporters like Key Peninsula Community Services, Aspen Land Surveying LLC, Bardside Aminal Lodge, Ltd., Key Peninsula Business Association, Sound Credit Union, Samycrest Nursery and Floral, Westwynd Motel, Apartments, and others!

You, too, can help make a difference for the Key Peninsula Civic Center, and the community, by becoming a "Friend of the Key Peninsula Civic Center." Register online at: <http://bit.ly/FriendsOfKPCivicCenter>

KP Civic Center to host 'Livable Fair' highlighting disaster prep

By Peter Ruble, KP News

The Key Peninsula Civic Center will be hosting its 13th annual Livable Fair on May 10, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

This year's theme will be "Together We Make Our Community Stronger." It will include more than 40 nonprofit and service organizations serving the Key Peninsula.

According to organizers, emergency preparedness classes will take place to teach people how to cook without power, bottle and store their own foods. Guests also will learn how to build outdoor shelters during an emergency; how to help injured pets and how to organize a neighborhood in the event of an emergency. This will take place in the center's VFW room.

Minter Creek Elementary School and its xylophone band will perform along with the Vaughn Elementary School choir.

The fair will also hold its "Community Spotlight," which showcases a local business, artist or organization that deserves special attention.

For the first time, a photo booth will be included with local portrait photographer Kellie Ann Henley. There will be artisans selling art in the Whitmore Room. Food will be available including fresh made turkey bacon, ham and cheese and vegetarian wraps. There also will be specials for children.

For information on the Livable Fair, contact 884-3456.

'Minter Moves' fundraiser comes this month

By Jessica Takehara, KP News

On May 16 from 4:30 to 7 p.m., Minter Creek Elementary students will get a chance to burn some energy and raise some money for their school. This is the PTA's spring fundraiser to support programs like Watch DOGS, Math Rocks, Read and Lead, Staff Appreciation and many more.

The event will have a carnival atmosphere and feature jogging/walking laps. Students will have the opportunity to seek flat donations from friends and family or for each lap achieved. Games, face painting and even a dunk tank are just some of the activities being planned.

Matt Kusche is the lead coordinator and invites the entire family to come and be part of this first annual event. Apart from food served by Murph's BBQ, there will also be a silent auction and raffle.

Reaching out for community involvement has been a main theme of the planning so far. Kusche said that parents, businesses and community organizations have been incredible with the positive response. More help is needed to make sure the event reaches the $10,000 goal, he said.

Kusche said donating time and items for the auction and raffle will assist in keeping overhead minimal. Helping Minter Creek students collect pledges is another way to get involved. Becoming a benefactor by donating $75 or more will ensure your name or business appears on the back of the official 2014 Minter Moves T-Shirt, he said.

For information, contact Kusche at (360) 265-6739 or mpkusche@hotmail.com.

Pets, humans have fun at Easter Egg Pet Hunt

By Leila Larson, KP News

The sixth annual Pet Easter Egg Hunt was hosted at Volunteer Park in April by Key Pen Parks in collaboration with Park Pals. Park Pals is an opportunity for youth to get involved in the parks system, according to Key Pen Parks recreation director Jessica Smeall. They volunteer to help organize and run many events and activities.

The free event kicked off with registration for the egg hunt and the costume contest. The only requirement to participate was for the pets to be both people- and pet-friendly. All of the dogs had costumes.

In addition to the parks department organizing and running the event, Park Pals members were serving hot chocolate and taking the redeemable "pet bucks" from the eggs and exchanging them for prizes including dog toys, treats and dog accessories.

There were several raffles that included assorted gifts from the Humane Society and an array of bird supplies donated by the Olympic Bird Fanciers. Other prizes were donated by the Brookside Animal Hospital, The Wild Bird Shop of Gig Harbor and Key Pen Parks.

The last portion of the official program was the costume contest, complete with more prizes.

Olympic Bird Fanciers had a booth and club members were offering advice to people who may consider a feathered friend to add to the family. There are many things about birds that owners should find out prior to adoption. Some may not be very good around young children or other pets. Other breeds may make noise at night or even peck at owners or visitors.

Several club members brought their birds to the event, including two very brilliantly feathered parrots, a lovebird and the star, a 30-year-old macaw. He was not very sociable, but was very colorful.

Key Peninsula-based 4-H Club, called Wags N Whiskers, also had a booth to provide information about joining or volunteering. The club works with dogs and members begin with obedience training. Ages for members are 8 to 21 years old. Adult volunteers are needed to provide information as well as structured events and activities for members.

The 4-H members demonstrated obedience training with their dogs, which is what they have been working on recently. All the dogs performed well and answered to their handlers.

The Humane Society's main purpose for attending this event was to educate people about caring for bunnies, who all become rabbits someday. Every year, not too long after Easter, they are flooded with bunnies and chicks that people do not want for pets. The Humane Society is trying the education outreach model to help prevent that. They had several flyers about rabbit care, breaking it down so that those who are not ready or set up for an adult rabbit may select another type of pet that would be more suitable.

Everyone enjoyed getting out in the sun and talking with friends and making some new ones.

Law office in Key Center set to defend KP citizen rights

By Peter Ruble, KP News

Key Center now has another law office with attorney Tracey Munger.

Munger, who lives in Lake of Woods, moved to the area specifically to start a law office in the heart of the Key Peninsula.

In particular, Munger was inspired by the high number of DUI cases on the Key Peninsula. These cases, she said, have affected low-income citizens who became stranded when it came to legal aid after the bus services in Key Center were shut down two years ago.

"It was unbelievable to me that this was the heart of the Key Peninsula and people with DUIs who weren't able to drive, had to somehow find a way to get to Tacoma to find a lawyer," Munger said. "I like to provide services to people who wouldn't normally be able to. I've never not been able to finance a customer."

Munger's fees are as low as $200 a month.

Munger is a defense attorney who fell in love with criminal law while working for the department of assigned council in Tacoma.

She prides herself on protecting citizens' rights. In particular, Munger emphasizes protecting the Fourth Amendment which protects against unreasonable search and seizures, the Fifth Amendment which protects against abuse of government, and the Sixth Amendment which guarantees a speedy trial and other traditional court related procedures.

"It's never about getting the bad guy off. It's about making sure that even the most guilty person has their rights protected so you will know that your rights are protected," she said.

A wealth of Munger's experience is in the domestic violence arena. Munger believes that the term "domestic violence" is used too broadly and is being used as an excuse to disarm a large portion of the public. A conviction of domestic violence means that you lose your rights to own a gun for life, she said.

"Domestic violence is about control and there has to be a pattern of abuse," Munger said.

Tracey Munger

She said one shouldn't lose one's gun rights because brothers and sisters get into a fight, or a mother slaps a child.

"By defining domestic violence the way the government has, they've been able to disarm a large segment of society. When you remove all forms of violent expression you are removing the establishment of the hierarchy and a pecking order. You get a lot of pent up rage," she said.

Munger is also an advocate for medical marijuana.

"We refer to 'Dr. Feelgoods' who are advocated," she said. Munger once had a client who suffered from hereditary neuropathy while in infantry training for the U.S. Army. The pain became so debilitating that the military recommended medical marijuana. She was able to successfully defend her client by proactively providing all the evidence in favor of medical marijuana. "Judges don't like medical marijuana," Munger said.

In the long run, Munger said she wants to have a global legal presence in Key Center where she can use her connections to the Pierce County Bar Association's referral services to access information from attorneys worldwide. She envisions having Saturday afternoon legal clinics in Key Center where anyone can come in and have a lawyer answer all their questions.

Driven to dance stirs KP teen

By Steve Whitford, KP News

Meet Jonathan Lique, a Key Peninsula resident and a young man of rare talent.

Lique is one of the seven children of John and Ronda Lique. He's 18 years old now and a senior at Peninsula High School, but even as a small child, music compelled him to the dance.

Though born in Washington, Lique spent his early years in Utah where at the age of 8 he joined a local school of dance known as "Studio P" and became its very first male dancer.

By age 9, Lique competed in a hip hop solo and began taking tap classes.

In his 10th year, he was doing a tap solo and began taking jazz dance classes. When Lique turned 11, his family moved back to Washington and he enrolled in the Just for Kicks Dance Studio located in Port Orchard.

The school is run and owned by Tanya Bleil Johnson and is managed by her mother, Pennie Bleil. The school has been open for the last 22 years.

Bleil is very impressed with Lique.

"His dance is incredible and he incorporates his personality into every performance, and he's also cute as a button," she said.

Since then, Lique has been nearly as busy as his feet. In the summer of 2011 and 2013 Lique taught a Saturday scholarship class at Just for Kicks.

He has performed at Peninsula High School and two seasons with the Vashon Dance Academy. On Feb. 14 of this year, he competed in the male division at the Hollywood Connection Dance Generation and was awarded the "Icon of the Year Award."

Lique dances 20 hours or more each week just to maintain his talent and stamina. He also attends West Sound Technical Skills Center, where he is studying hospitality and tourism, all to better prepare him for a life in entertainment.

He said he wants to dance as much as he can while he can, as time is the thief of talent. "Dancing makes me feel free. I emote through the dance," Lique said.

This summer, Lique has the opportunity to audition for a business called Stiletto Entertainment, known for staffing the entertainment on cruise ships.

In his spare time, Lique is teaching at the Gig Harbor Boys & Girls Club which had a recital on April 25.

This summer, Lique hopes to spend six weeks taking classes at the Oregon Ballet Theater. This experience will be expensive and Lique's parents hope supporters will donate to his cause. They can be reached at liquefamily7@aol.com.

Lola Frances Howe

Lola Frances Howe passed away peacefully at her home in Big Springs, Calif., on March 30, at the age of 79.

Howe was born in Klamath Falls, Ore., to John and Ruby Edwards on Aug. 26, 1934, and grew up in Butte Valley. She and William Howe were married on Aug. 30, 1962.

Howe lived in Home for about 10 years, and served on the Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars on the Key Peninsula.

Howe loved the outdoors. She enjoyed fishing, hunting and loved going to the ocean with her family. She was an incredible wife and very loving mother.

Howe is survived by her husband, William; her son, Harold Flackus; her daughter, Lola Cash; her sister, Mary Tucker; along with numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Online condolences may be made at girdnerfuneralchapel.com.
